

Welcome to the 18th issue of the big belch news. I was thinking, since the word “news” is in the title, that it should have actual news in it. So let’s start with some.

DENVER – President Barack Obama and Mitt Romney were about to talk about issues that affect every American when a worm crawled on the stage. Obama cried “de bait!” Romney, noticing the worm, asked “Are you thinking what I’m thinking?” So they left and went fishing together.

Facebook has one billion users and I’m not one of them.

Like “big belch news” on facebook!

And be sure to visit our twitter account at #bigbelchnews or whatever. I don’t know. I might get a twitter account for big belch news, the only problem is no one reads the newsletter.

I tweeted a twit. I liked my anus on Facebook.

I’m fat.

There’s a fat newsanchor who keeps getting bullied. This bully needs to realize that if he’s not fat, he’s in the minority. Everyone is fat. I’m fat. There should be a t-shirt that says “I’m fat and proud of it!” If god wanted us to eat vegetables and fruit, he would have made them taste good. Instead, we eat cakes and donuts because they taste good. And they clog our arteries, making us die. So there’s proof that god wants us all to die. Why does god want us to die? To damn us all to Hell.

“And they sang a new song before the throne and before the four living creatures and the elders. No one could learn the song except the 144,000 who had been redeemed from the earth.” –Revelation 14:3

Big Belch Bird News.

Lately in the debate there's been a lot of talk about Big Bird.

Well, even if Big Bird dies, I think the kids won't care. It was just like Mr. Hooper dying, only instead of the cast explaining, it'll be the parents. Now I love Mr. Rogers as much as the next person, but he's dead! Argh!

More talk about birds, but these are even bigger birds. They are the university of Oregon Ducks. Right now they are the second-best team in the country. And the Seattle Seahawks are sucky as usual. Why are there a whole lot of teams in the northwest named after birds? Don't ask me, I've only seen raccoons.

“UCLA astronomers report the discovery of a remarkable star that orbits the enormous black hole at the center of our Milky Way galaxy in a blistering 11-and-a-half years — the shortest known orbit of any star near this black hole.

The star, known as S0-102, may help astronomers discover whether Albert Einstein was right in his fundamental prediction of how black holes warp space and time, said research co-author Andrea Ghez, leader of the discovery team and a UCLA professor of physics and astronomy who holds the Lauren B. Leichtman and Arthur E. Levine Chair in Astrophysics.”

Commentary:

How come nobody told me that there's a black hole in the center of our solar system? Well, I think I should make a device that plunges the Earth towards it and kill us all. This could be my one chance to fame: Killing the entire earth! I'll be world-known. Of course, I wouldn't be around to reap the rewards of fame, but as I'd sit down in the afterlife, I'd be happy knowing that I killed off the whole world. Hopefully there is afterlife because if there isn't, I would be pissed off. Wait a minute, no I wouldn't, I wouldn't be existing at all. Oh well, at least Obama wouldn't be president.
