

Big belch news.

January 17, 2013 \ #36 in a series.

Hi. This issue is all about crap that's hap...pening in the nation. From Connecticut to Oregon, if it's crap, it's here. We start with the nefarious doings of one president Barack Obama.

AAAA! It's BRCK OBM!

A Prof. claims that the Newtown "tragedy" didn't happen as it was reported by the media. On Jan. 8, Radar Online reported that a Florida Atlantic University communications professor named James Tracy has suggested that the tragedy at Sandy Hook Elementary School last month was actually a planned hoax put in to play by the Obama administration.

"As documents relating to the Sandy Hook shooting continue to be assessed and interpreted by independent researchers, there is a growing awareness that the media coverage of the massacre of 26 children and adults was intended primarily for public consumption to further larger political ends," Prof. Tracy wrote on his blog.

The Prof. who claimed Newtown didn't happen the way that people believe it did says that the Obama administration planned the hoax to sway people's opinions about gun control - a hot topic in today's society. Tracy feels that there was a "political agenda" behind the shooting and he urges people to look at the event more critically.

And now, thoughts from Neener.

Presidential hoaxes are nothing new. Just think about the thousands of people who died from just one hoax. I still maintain 9/11 was a hoax by the Bush Administration. And then there was the moon landing. And then there was the one where we all thought Abraham Lincoln was a man. The United States population is a bunch of sheep willing to believe anything reported on TV, while fiddling with their smartphones and tweeting. I was wondering when a hoax by Obama was going to happen. I had to wait 4 years, but it finally surfaced.

Speaking of BM...

“Even Batman never went up against a rogue as nefarious as the one who's currently stalking Portland, Ore. This super villain is prowling the streets, attaching stickers to stop signs and transforming them into "poop" signs. Gasp! At least two innocent signs have been cruelly attacked so far — one in Old Town, the other at the Joan of Arc statue in the Laurelhurst neighborhood. There's no telling where this crime spree could end. Soon, this devious scoundrel might alter stop signs around the nation (around the world!) forever. Or at least until someone peels the stickers off.”

I have a question. Do you actually stop at a poop sign? I mean, it doesn't say to stop. Or do you poop at a poop sign? Poop your pants in a car. Then when the cops pull you over for not stopping at a poop sign, you can explain what the smell inside your car is, unless your poop smells like marijuana, in which case you're screwed and shouldn't have eaten marijuana anyway.

Cold.

Last weekend, it was really cold. It didn't get above freezing here at big belch news hq. Why was it so cold? I don't know. Maybe god forgot that this isn't Alaska and he got disoriented and thought it was but it actually isn't. Well, Monday wasn't much better, but it's been really cold. And no snow, either. What a waste of cold weather. If it's going to be this cold, it might as well snow, but no. God hates me.

Sports news.

Ducks coach Chip Kelly is gone. He's now the head coach of the NFL's Philadelphia Eagles.

Lance Armstrong admitted to using performance enhancing drugs to win his 7 Tour de France races.

It's too cold for me to go play basketball.

© 2013, big belch news.