

Bigf belch news.

Number 67. November 15, 2013.

So, the biggest storm ever to hit land hitted land on the Philippines. Typhoon Haiyan killed thousands. And sitting here in the US makes me think about how I want to help those in the Philippines. I want to deliver the goods to them. And by goods, I mean issues of big belch news. The only problem is I don't know anyone over there, and even if I did, the postal service probably wouldn't deliver anything over there since the whole country got knocked down. And they can't log on to the website because they probably lost power. You know who I wish would lose power? Obama. Liar. First he said he could keep our coverage, then only to find out we actually can't. And all he did was say "I'm sorry I got caught lying.*"

* = I added those last four words.

The bucs won their first game on Monday Night Football. They are now 1 win and 8 losses. Tell that to Seattle who is 9 wins and only 1 loss. And who did Tampa Bay beat? The Miami Dolphins, the team that is in a quagmire over that guy who quit because he got abused by his teammate, Mr. Incognito. Yes, that's his real name. Incognito. I wish he would be incognito. Idiot.

Well, coming up soon is the 50th anniversary of the JFK assassination. Dumb idiot was riding with his top down (his car, not his shirt) and someone took a shot at him. That's what you get when you ride in a motorcade with no protection. You get a funeral. Well, anyway, the book Killing Kennedy by Bill O'Reilly is a book about how to kill JFK. And I mean the guy, not the airport. We don't need another guy shooting people at airports. And we certainly don't need another woman mauled to death by a cougar. Cougars don't really do anything, do they? They're not food for other animals, and their diet consists mainly of cats that people are too stupid to leave outdoors. Now if they ate raccoons, that would be a different story, because raccoons bit this woman's leg. Too bad she wasn't covered by Obamacare. That's what we're calling the Affordable Care Act. Because Obamacare is shorter, but it's really an oxymoron because Obama doesn't really care. And do you know what Obamacare anagrams out to? More abaca. And what's an abaca? A plant in the Philippines. So we've gone full circle here.

last Monday was veteran's day. I am a veteran. Did I say veteran? I meant veterinarian. I treat dogs. Well, I give dogs treats. OK, I give one dog treats. But only if she pees when I take her outside. Since we didn't have an issue for veterans day, I wish you all a happy thanksgiving, even though you probably won't because you'll all be out shopping. On Thanksgiving Day. And not be happy about the fact that stores are open on Thanksgiving. Just be glad you're not the people that have to work then. They don't get Thanksgiving off. Oh, and before everyone else does, I want to wish you happy new year. The year I'm wishing happiness on you is 2015. So there, I beat them all. Not that I don't want you to have a really lousy 2014. But with Obama being president, you probably will. And you voted for him, so you're stuck with the lying moron.

I went to the zoo. I saw an aasvogel, an aardvark and an aardwolf. I yelled "aargh!" because Aaron stepped on an aal that was right next to the aalii. He might have hurt his ab, but thankfully he was wearing his aba. Next to the aalii was an abaca. I was taken aback by the abacus near the abaft of the ship that hit the abalone. The electric eel gave an abampere of shock which caused me to abandon ship, which made me leap of the abapical part of the ship. Unfortunately due to my antics, I was abased. I was abashed because I picked on the guy with abasia.

The preceding story was brought to you by all the words in the first column of the scrabble dictionary.

And this whole issue is brought to you by the abaca. It's a plant from the Philippines.

© 2013, chris read / bbn.